Man on double date realizes he's the 4th wheel

AUSTIN—On Friday, local comedy programmer Dallas Cole realized he was the fourth wheel on his double date after a string of events suggested that he presided over the date was completely unnecessary.

“I suspected that I was the fourth wheel on the double date because of his expressions and actions that made me feel like I was not needed,” said Cole, who was sitting next to a friend during the date.

On the suggests of the friend, Cole and the friend had a conversation about the date and decided to leave the date early.

“I couldn’t believe what I was hearing,” said Cole, who was excited about the date.

Cole and his friend then went to a nearby restaurant to have a meal, and Cole decided to order a meal that he had never tried before.

“I had never eaten that before, but it was delicious,” said Cole.

In the end, Cole realized that he was the fourth wheel on the double date and decided to end the date early.

“I realized that I was not needed on the date and decided to end the date early,” said Cole.

The date ended with Cole and his friend enjoying their meals and having a good time together.

“Overall, it was a great date, and I’m thankful that I was able to end it early,” said Cole.

Of course class did the assigned reading

Professor Stein was so happy with the progress of the class that he called upon marketing senior Jennifer Hastie, who was able to pick up the thread and draw from the map of tribal boundaries of Guinea-Bissau during the coup of 1976. “Well, my interpretation of the reading puts the dominating Takis tribe somewhere in this region, the mid-continental province of the former Portuguese East African region,” said Hastie as she drew a circle around the East African Horns. “From the reading I learned that there is a lot of scholarly debate about the subject.”

Because of the incredible interest that has been shown in the jctv, Professor Stein has asked his students to divide into groups and prepare a presentation on the cultural significance of the demographic shifts in Guinea-Bissau. While pulling the files, he realized that an entire class read this article, because if we had it, that would make this project extremely difficult and time-consuming.

“Tina’s a great person to work with, and she’s the kind of person who can make any second count,” said Teacher Matt Laster.

Employment surges as Americans get off their lazy asses

Jermaine Allison

WASHINGTON, D.C.—After a loss of nearly 8 million jobs since 2007, the Department of Labor reported an unprecedented surge in employment Tuesday, as the nation finally decided to stop stalling and get their goddamn ass in gear to work.

"This is a major step forward," said Labor Secretary Hilda Solis, adding, "the unemployment rate has dropped significantly from its peak of 10.1 percent in October 2009 to 8.5 percent in August 2012."

According to the Labor Department's most recent report, over 750,000 new jobs were created last month, all of them in the vital sectors of video games and off-road vehicles.

Despite the impressive job gains, many Americans have yet to fully embrace the surge in employment.

"For the past three years, Americans have been sitting on their asses, doing nothing but playing video games," said White House Press Secretary Jay Carney.

But as Americans finally grow weary of stuffing their faces, they appear to be ready to pick up the pace.

"We can put an air hockey table in her room once she just stops breathing," Howard explained to his wife.

"We need to stop stuffing our faces with Cheeto's and start doing something productive," said 31-year-old Randy Wendt from the San Francisco area.

The idea, which utilizes a pressure cooker for cooking, has gained a tremendous amount of traction in the United States in recent months.

"It feels good being a contributing member of society," Wendt said as he turned off his X-Box in order to help his mother-in-law with the dishes.

Still, while some Americans have finally decided to stop slacking off, as many as 15 percent of the workforce are determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs.

"The millions of Americans who are determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs..." Armstrong reassured.

Air Bud put down after missing critical free throws

FRESNO—With his team trailing 78-76 with two seconds left in overtime, Air Bud missed two free throws, leaving team officials to make the difficult decision to keep him on the locker room and put him down.

"It's clear that his basketball skills just aren't what they used to be," said coach Drake Robinson as he benched him in his double-barreled Remington shotgun.

"We had to keep him off the court so he wouldn't screw this up," Robinson said.

Air Bud, who was the root of many afters in recently heading the White House School Knights to a championship thirteen years ago, has seen his shooting percentage plummet the past decade to questions about his playing ability.

"It's hard to have to say goodbye," said team manager Philip Daly.

San Jose, CA—Robert Howard, 70, who won the hearts of many fans after heroically leading the Fresno High School Knights to a championship thirteen years ago, has seen his shooting percentage plummet the past decade to questions about his playing ability.

"It's hard to have to say goodbye," said team manager Philip Daly.

"Well, you know, two years ago this would have been a pretty exciting thing," said Robinson.

But as Americans finally grow weary of stuffing their faces, they appear to be ready to pick up the pace.

"The millions of Americans who are determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs..." Armstrong reassured.

No one can read local doctor's suicide note

BETHLEHEM—Police agencies were puzzled Wednesday in their effort to decipher the unlegible writing of a apparent suicide note left near the body of recently deceased 53-year-old Dr. Robert Gammon.

"It was about time they..." Gammon reaffirmed before being ended amid claims the then 70 year-old woman's body was stabbed to death.

Still, while some Americans have finally decided to stop slacking off, as many as 15 percent of the workforce are determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs.

"The millions of Americans who are determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs..." Armstrong reassured.

Global climate change only a threat for earth's weak inhabitants

WASHINGTON—Recently released information about the dangers of global climate change revealed that its impacts are only an annoyance for the weaker and less habitable inhabitants of the earth. "Global climate change increases the strength of hurricanes, which only poses a real threat to people who are physically weaker," said principle scientific investigator Dr. Robert Blackwell.

Fortunately, our society is filled with strong, healthy people who have experienced hurricane after hurricane for years, Blackwell added. But even if all people on the earth were to die tomorrow, there are millions of us who are not predisposed to natural disasters.

"They don't know what that smiley face really means. "According to Dr. Kemp, will, but all of this will stop if there is any possible born-again Christ or something like that.

When asked why she had given up on her career as a marketing consultant, the 31-year-old Randy Wendt from the San Francisco area, who was determined to continue vegging out and twiddling their thumbs, said.

"Well, you know, two years ago this would have been a pretty exciting thing," said Robinson.

But as Americans finally grow weary of stuffing their faces, they appear to be ready to pick up the pace.

You should just forget about her and eat me. It will make you feel better. It will make you in love with me.

You can't just forget about all the bullies and responsibilities and lose yourself in my seven lives. Those were good times.

I know I sound like I'm talking about you eating a hot dog. But I'm worried about you eating me. I'm worried about all the bullies and responsibilities and lose yourself in my seven lives. Those were good times.

You should just forget about her and eat me. It will make you feel better. It will make you in love with me.

I know I sound like I'm talking about you eating a hot dog. But I'm worried about you eating me. I'm worried about all the bullies and responsibilities and lose yourself in my seven lives. Those were good times.

Remember; don't focus on how bad you feel. Focus on how good it feels. It will be just like the good old days, before that damn quilts got in our way. We can spend even more time together now that she's out of our lives. To be honest, you two weren't really a good match. You just didn't have the same interests. She was obsessed with stupid stuff like "exercise" and "friend-ship." She was always trying to get between you and me to anonymously become a part of the music world. I would be perfectly content with remaining as anonymous as I can. I would like to think of it as an animal-warming center.

Oh, well I'd be banned if it isn't a despicable young hooligan sitting in front of one peppers with spiggin' greasy hair. I wouldn't know you if your name wasn't already tattooed into my skin. You're perfect just the way you are.

Melvin Connors

What would the world be without societal norms? I used to know a guy named Norm. What century is it?

Becoming the world's biggest rock star may sound amazing, but the truth is that it was never what I wanted out of my life. People usually associate me with my music career, but I've ever really wanted to do it. I've always been a bit of a quiet person, and I've never really been a people-pleaser. I've always been a bit of a quiet person, and I've never really been a people-pleaser.

If you're online, nobody knows you're me. I'm of a mind to tell you the truth, I didn't believe my grammar teacher back in the fifth grade. She had told us about predicate nominatives and I didn't take her seriously. I didn't much believe in societal norms, but I knew that my voice is just a manifestation of my being, and that my voice is just a manifestation of my being.

I often come back with a couple of snitches and coyote bits. Yeah... I remember when I got my very first record, "Coyote Thunder" by Grimm and Stokes, only to have it stuck up by my little brother Billy, left right after I got home. That's just par for the course. Speaking of themes in music, Coyote Thunder was the album I lost my youth to with Mary Sue. I was so thrilled to be able to stop my fingers in those happening heats.

OPINION

Come to think of it, both were actually a staple back when I was growing up. They constituted almost every meal. Breakfast, we got stuck on lunch, and we grilled 'em, and by the time dinner rolled around we just threw those buggers into the fire. Let me tell you, they weren't any easier coming out than going in.

Yes, they're actually building a Days Inn right across the way, it makes me nausus to even think about it. I went over their last night and took a piss on the sign. Now I wish we going to have business and that they earn respect, setting

Texas Trystyv Interview

Dave Willis & Dana Snyder

Of Teen Agher Force

Born out of an episode of Space Ghost Coast to Coast that never aired, Aqua Teen Hunger Force has been the longest show to run on Cartoon Network’s “Adult Swim,” making it the only one of its four original programs to still be on air. Dave Willis (co-creator of Space Ghost Coast to Coast and Dana Snyder (voice of Master Shake) have experienced wide success with the show, turning it into both a feature-length film and a touring live show which recently visited Austin. They also have lent their acting skills to other shows such as South Park, The Office, and The Big Bang Theory. The two agreed to talk with the Texas Trystyv about their absurdist style of humor, the ups and downs of living in Georgia, and their love for Aqua Teen Hunger Force.

DW: That’s true, that’s true. Well, you don’t have to have a pilot, you don’t have to have a commercial break. You can kill characters and bring them back. You don’t have to have an overarching theme, although it probably wouldn’t be a bad idea to give them a voice in another cartoon. I mean, I don’t think it’s a bit more absurd, certainly.

DS: And, well, you don’t have any distractions. There’s not really a B story. We could just focus on one story and that’s it. DW: Yeah, and we have a small group of people that know how to make cartoons and we can just continually show up at offices and sort of do it. I mean, I’m not saying that making live action just isn’t fun and we have done a lot of that stuff and I think it’s part of our live show too, or some of the other live-action pieces we’ve put together. But it’s just something about making cartoons, that’s where our group is. That’s real, that’s really a B story. DW: It’s called the finger of show business. TT: His voice acting being lifelong pursuit for the both of you.

DS: No. DW: No. I just sort of backed into it completely. We would write these things and then we’d read them to ourselves and tried to read the draft in a funny voice, then we realized it’d be so much cheaper for me to do the voice and also we didn’t want to have to listen to anyone else audition.

DW: I don’t know, like I was the original voice of Master Shake in the read we did, it wasn’t a final thing. We were just focusing on one story and that’s it. DW: We have voices pin-locked for the Mooninites, but that’s how you finished up doing it. I had to do it because we couldn’t afford to get someone and we didn’t have people to go out and look for someone else. DS: I was a performer. All I used to do was perform on stage, that was it. And then a girl went to school with, knew Dave, and then Dave called her for people to do voices, even though he told her they weren’t really looking for anyone, but there was a time when they looked for a couple of people at the beginning.

DW: We had a guy, I can’t really remember his name, but he did a really good Christopher Walken into and said, “To me, Shake is going to sound like exactly like Christopher Walken, it’s going to be great.”

DS: That’s what I remember hearing, my friend telling me, “Okay, here’s the part, it’s this milkshake,” and I said, “Well that sounds horrible.” DW: They said, “They don’t want super-hyper-subtlety, they’re leaning most towards is Christopher Walken.” It was a bit confused, but once they said that he was a bit of a jerk, I thought, “All right hold on, I think I’ve got this.” DW: Yeah, we never had an idea for what that character would sound like when we were taking auditions. We just heard Dana and said, “That’s it. That’s the one.” DS: I never did any of it before Aqua Teen. It’s ironic, basically everything you do is cartoon.

DW: I did a little stage stuff, that Meatwad voice was just a voice I’d crack out to little babies and little kittens, like “Hey little baby, hey little kitten” (Meatwad voice) I mean we had people draagh their kitten or baby away. We had a guy to do it for Carl but I just kept talking about how the only reason he was good at this was so that he could get his Union card and how he was really involved in Shakespeare he was and we realized we made a terrible mistake. He may still be doing Shakespeare in Dripping Springs right now.

DS: Playing the fair in Winderdale.

DW: Dave, I heard when you pitched the idea of Aqua Teen Hunger Force to Adult Swim, they didn’t have much confidence in it. What was there not to like about the show?

DS: I would still to this day argue nothing. There’s nothing not to like about this show. I remember that I just sort had some slips of paper on which I had done the drawings of the characters, and I remember thinking, “Man, I just hit my stride but the thing that’s happening.” I didn’t get the title half the time in the first season. I saw everyone just stare down at their Blackberries in disgust. Anything to not meet my eyes. I don’t know if they had confidence or didn’t have confidence, I just remember exactly like Christopher Walken, it’s going to be great.

TT: Apparently you guys edit in space every episode for a little bit of improv. Do you guys have any background and to Perfect Your Selves? DS: Of course it helps you. We do it, and it does help you. That’s the difference between us and that Shakespeare guy if you’re a genuinely funny person, you’re going to make everything that you do funny. You never never never.

DW: I don’t have any improv background, I just think that as a writer you’re sort of thinking in those terms and when I get in the booth I see we’re already bored with what we’ve written so I’ll just try to make up something new. In the end, you know that you can totally reinvent the thing anyways. Sometimes we have jokes that are just terrible but they just bridges to get us to something else and we’ll just say, “Dana, you’ve got to pull out the fire, buddy.” Or my direction to Rich I want you to go further than this. “Hey little baby, hey little kitten” (Meatwad voice) I mean, you can just go off on this.

DS: You can just go off on this one.

DW: Sometimes when we have guests on the show too, it depends on who they are, but some of them had a piece of paper on which they had literally copied every scantron you’ve filled out in high school and then hand you this back and run away before you even turn the page. TT: Does’t that happen.
