Point: Barack Obama has ruined this country

When my parents escaped from communist Cuba, they sought refuge in 1960s America, a land of domestic tranquility and no civil unrest. Today this great nation has been effectively destroyed by Barack Obama, the most divisive president in history. He has inflamed racial tensions at every turn, from visiting a mosque to promote "unity" to drawing undue attention to the isolated events in Ferguson. And all to trumpet his inflammatory message of "political correctness" that restricts the first amendment rights of people who simply want to offend their fellow Americans. Furthermore, he has proliferated the ridiculous idea that government is responsible for providing for the general welfare of its citizens, forcing healthcare down the throats of 17 million people. Obamacare is a train wreck, a train wreck wrapped in a late term abortion made in China by fascist communist gun control Nazis.

Counterpoint: No, Barack Obama has torn this country apart

I am truly humbled to be here today with my friend Senator Rubio, but I have to disagree with him. When my father left Cuba with $100 sewn into the lining of his pants, he came to America because it was the superpower of the world. This is the America that Obama has desecrated. He has appeased our enemies by making a "peace" deal with Iran and by failing to carpet-bomb ISIS. He has not declared war on Russia, China, or the Socialist Republic of Canada, a country I have no affiliation with. Just last year, North Korean Dictator Kim Jong Un tested a hydrogen bomb and started a new K Pop super group that threatens American dominance in the music industry. In response, this president did nothing. He has weakened our military, spending a measly $598.5 billion in 2015. Worst of all, Obamacare is a car crash seasoned in a marinade of gun control and free contraception garnished with liberal media lies.

NSA agent can't help chiming in

DECATUR, IL — It was late Tuesday during their nightly phone call when Dan Smits and Rudy Mills became another in a series of victims harassed by an NSA agent who just couldn't help but chime in. "Citizen 03426 thought he could get away with claiming that 'Saving Private Ryan' won the Oscar in '98, when we all remember how 'Shakespeare In Love' stole the gold that night," explained the agent, who for weeks now has been correcting old ladies who flub their grandkids' ages, fathers who accidentally put their sons on mute, and sons who make mean comments to their fathers after intentionally putting them on mute. "And I don't care what broads you're trying to impress or which fancy Big Brother watchlists you're on—there's no way you've finished 'Infinite Jest,' chief." At press time, the government pawn had just challenged the American public to '80s hip-hop trivia, "any time, any place."

Local man wishes subconscious would cast hotter people in sex dreams

SAN MARCOS, TX — Following another steamy dream featuring a nondescript female, local man, Gary Johnson, expressed desire for his subconscious to place hotter people in his sex dreams. "The dreams have become so remarkably unsexy that was it not for my... um... physical response, I probably wouldn't even consider them wet dreams," said Johnson, who remains stunned that his impressive familiarity with pornography classics, such as Good Will Humping and Edward Penishands, has failed to affect the creativity of his subconscious. "Honestly, all of the women in my dream are so bland, I'm having a hard time telling if they're even female." As of press time, Johnson could be found listlessly perusing the collection of erotic cinema that his mind refuses to recreate.

As of press time, Debbie Perrat was last seen wearing an aluminium foil antennae while texting her son Justin about the 🗿s and the 🗿s.

Local grandma asks how to put phone on vibrator mode

ROUND ROCK, TX — Last night Gretchen Schleps, 82-year-old retiree and grandmother of 7 beautiful grandchildren, reportedly called her grandson, Freddie Bumbo, asking how to put her phone on vibrator mode. "At first she called my cousin, Morton, but he started vomiting so profusely that he couldn't answer," Bumbo told reporters while testing the firmness of HEB's cucumbers as another favor for his grandmother. "Nana G just hasn't been the same since she found her old Barry Manilow records." As of press time, Gretchen Schleps had finally answered her phone after 37 minutes of reporters trying to call her, and then asked to be called again during a rerun of Magnum, P.I.

Dallas once again responsible for bringing gross disease into Texas

DALLAS — After spending the past 11 months painstakingly cleaning the Ebola virus out of the halls of Texas Presbyterian Hospital, a Zika virus outbreak has forced janitor Clifford Juarez back into sanitizing overdrive, making Dallas once again responsible for bringing the newest, grossest virus into Texas. “It’s so easy, you just have to wash your hands after you take a piss and wrap up your package before engaging in some sweet coitus,” mumbled Juarez as he sprayed lemony lysol on a Zika-riddled infant. “These damn yuppies with their kale and interracial dating are making our damn city a swimming cesspool of germs.” As of press time Juarez was seen sneezing on a patient, instead of into his elbow.

Cat sends pitiful mew into cosmic void

ANCHORAGE, AK — While resting atop a refrigerator earlier this week, local cat, Werner Purrzog, sent out a pitiful mew into the cosmic void. “My life on this planet has been a constant series of cataclysmic events. As a species we are more deserving of extinction than a trilobite or a reptile. So we will vanish,” lamented Mr. Purrzog as his owner groomed his snowy white fur and tied a tiny red bow atop his head. “Three people are sitting in a silent tourist cafe between clouds and clouds, protected by glass on all sides. Since I don’t see any waiters, it crosses my mind that corpses have been sitting there for weeks, statuesque. All this time the cafe has been unattended, I am sure. Just how long have they been sitting here, petrified like this?” At press time Werner Purrzog could be seen sitting unflinchingly still amidst a barrage of laser pointers.

Grandma too racist to enjoy ethnic nurse’s sexual advances

CANTON, TX — Despite her ethnic nurse’s thoroughly muscled physique, grandma Phyllis Glass reportedly found herself too racist to enjoy his sexual advances. “I know what your people love to do, but this low-hanging fruit is not for the picking,” said the grandmother of five, as she watched her nurse, Domingo, lubricate a nearby catheter. “If he thinks he can split me like one of his precious coconuts, he’s got another thing coming.” As of press time, Glass was overheard complaining that not only were the illegals draining this country of its jobs, they were also draining her of her blood.

Area dad shares Amazon Prime login, horrifying purchase history

Area dad Steve Phillips reportedly shared his Amazon Prime login with his family on Monday, revealing a horrifying purchase history. “What possible need would dad have for an eyepatch, an ’80s Jane Fonda aerobics video and a bottle of ‘Bubble Bath Lavender Dream,’” asked his daughter Annie Phillips, 20, in genuine despair. “In the past, he did nothing especially out of the ordinary, besides wearing that awful teal leather jacket every-time we go to Juanita’s Tex-Mex Hacienda.” Phillips’ son, Billy, 13, remained optimistic. “I saw he ordered ‘Reptiles for Dummies’ and snake food—snakes are cool, right?” said Billy as he dipped his yoyo down and up again. “Though I’ve got a feeling I don’t want to hear that album he ordered: ‘Passion, Pain and Pleasure.’ I can’t say what ‘lubricant’ really is either, but I’m thinking you use it for ear wax if you need extra ear wax.” Phillips’ wife, Irene, says her first move was to call the police after seeing her husband’s Amazon purchase history. “I found out he was keeping a snake farm in the attic... Why does he do these things? We could have all died,” she sobbed, dabbing a tear from her upper cheek. “The only time we’ve had sex this month was after watching ‘Snakes on a Plane,’ but I thought that was because I wore my leggy nightgown.” According to multiple neighborhood sources, large snake tracks have been spotted in driveway gravel, adding to the growing sense of dread that began with the realization that mail packages were being stolen around the area. Over the past month, Greenlake Neighborhood Watch, the preemptive authority on going-ons in the area, had suspected Old Finnegan, a man that lives up the hill, as a potential suspect, but now a case is forming for Steve, considering his Amazon goods addiction. “Now Steve is a prime suspect for the stolen packages, which creates an unwieldy situation, as he is my Watch Deputy,” noted Sebastian Smith, Greenlake Neighborhood Watch Captain. Stephanie Phillips, the youngest of the Steve’s children, is also wary of her father. “Well, my hamster Louie disappeared last week, but daddy got me a real life magic wand from Amazon so I don’t think I’ll mention it—if daddy ever comes back,” said Stephanie, as she played chef in a pink, plastic miniature kitchen. As of press time, the father was seen clambering up a tree scarcely two blocks over from his home and family, wearing a teal leather jacket.

“The only time we’ve had sex this month was after watching ‘Snakes on a Plane.’”

Candlelight vigil scheduled for unspecified future

FERGUSON, MO — Citing endless centuries of torment as their motivation, protesters in Ferguson are now full-swing into preparations for next week's candlelight protest against any of multiple likely future tragedies. "We try to always be prepared in the event of violent institutional racism, mass shootings or public poisonings," said campaign organizer Martha Grenadine, surrounded by posters reading "Never Again" and "Why Did This Happen Again?" at a sign-making party for the event. "Believe me, next time there's an abortion crisis or corruption scandal or terrible human rights abuse, we'll be ready." At press time, volunteers were eagerly scanning the news for signs of a financial catastrophe, uncontrolled disease outbreak, manipulation of the democratic process, sharp rise in inequality, prison overcrowding or unjustifiable war.

Confused Tom Brady wanders into Super Bowl

SANTA CLARA, CA — In his third attempted fake of the night, Tom Brady made another unsuccessful bid to get past the security guards surrounding Levi's Stadium. "I can see you, Tom!" shouted Sam Indy, head of stadium security, as the 6' 4" Brady ran with trademark speed to crouch behind a Panthers logo decorated trash can. "He just keeps muttering about 'number five' and 'those damn Broncos.' I don't think he has accepted that the Patriots aren't playing." As of press time, Brady was witnessed pelting the stadium entrance with his four previously won Super Bowl rings.

Area man uses workout to justify every action for rest of day

AUSTIN — Having hopped on the treadmill for about a half hour this morning, local man Herb Little used his exercise as an excuse to do whatever the hell he wanted for the remainder of the day. "Props to me, man. Anything I do from now til sundown doesn't matter. I feel like a winner today," Little mumbled during a 20-minute period of scratching his kneecaps. "God, it feels good to lose all pretense of needing to do something worthwhile now that I have this done." At press time, Little could be found fiddling with his pocket lint without an iota of shame.

Man tries to collect disability for knowing Spanish

LOS ANGELES — It was late Thursday at the Social Security office that Andrew Campbell, 35, demanded he be awarded disability benefits for understanding a little bit of Spanish. "When I was a child, our housekeeper Rosa used to put on telenovelas while she cleaned," said Mr. Campbell with an unnecessary amount of "r" rolling. "I'm definitely at a disadvantage because of it. All of this time I have been suffering. It's hard enough to hear the mean things people say about me in English. It's another thing to know that my landscaper and that guy at Taco Bell have been making fun of me this whole time." As of press time, Mr. Campbell was still in the Social Security office waiting room, listening as a wheelchair bound man berated him in Spanish.

Acting major can't tell if she faked orgasm

AUSTIN — Awestruck yet again by her own execution of the craft, acting major Moody Monroe is unsure of whether her most recent orgasm was faked or not. "The guy wasn't even noir enough for me, but nothing turns me on like a monologue from 'Phantom,'" said a hot-faced Monroe, stopping mid sentence to catch her breath and excuse herself to the bathroom. "Part of me wonders if we ever do anything that's not acting. It's not just a hobby for me—every breath I take is part of my act. It would make sense that my climax was simply a result of me pouring my heart into a dramatic moment." As of press time, Monroe was seen lacing up a jet black pair of Capezio jazz sneakers in the morning even though her audition was not until later that afternoon.

Identity thief living area man's life better than he ever could

LINCOLN, NE — Area man Stew Miller's life is seemingly much more interesting now that an identity thief has taken over. "According to my credit card company, he paid for a few meals at Buffalo Wild Wings—must've had friends with him—then bought tickets to a Kendrick Lamar concert. I'm frustrated I have to deal with this crap, but, even more so, I'm kinda bummed I never do fun stuff like that," admitted Miller in between sips of a warm Diet Sprite Zero. "It sucks that he went and wasted my money, but maybe I wouldn't have minded had he asked me to hang out with him instead." Following this interview, sources report seeing Miller unable to pay for some copies he'd made at Kinko's due to his credit card being cancelled.

Valentine's Day cry for help mistaken for Valentine's Day joke

OMAHA — During a fairly standard water cooler chat, office bachelor Steve Frud made a tragic Valentine's Day cry for help, mistaken for a hilarious Valentine's Day joke. "I'm not sure why my co-workers laughed so hard and for so long. I looked them straight in the eyes and told them 'Have fun on your Valentine's dates tonight boys, really cherish the companionship, for I know nothing of it.' And then they keeled over," said Frud, wiping his eyes from 'all the pollen in the air.' "Seriously, even if it was a joke, it definitely wasn't piss your pants funny. All I'm saying is, I'm unbearably lonely." At press time, Frud's co-workers were asking how long he'd been taking acting courses to perfect his fake tears.
