AUSTIN — What should have been the best night of Stuart Williams’ life and the peak of his open-mike career quickly devolved into tears and bargaining with higher powers when some drunk girl won the Dopest Person in Austin slam poetry contest. “I just… I can’t believe this amateur won, I can do better than that off the top of my head,” stammered Williams while tying a third cashmere scarf around his neck. “I remember my first IPA, I remember my first… let’s see… I remember my first IPA… back in the day… my dad caught me, he said ‘Hey’… grounded for the rest of the day… that was back in May…” At press time, Williams was seen ordering a round of shots to prepare himself for his next slam.

Area boyfriend unaware he is in open relationship

AUSTIN — UT sophomore Ian Nichols is still unaware he is in an open relationship with junior Emma Freeman. “At first I thought it was kind of weird,” admitted Nichols as he held the door open for Emma and Antonio, Emma’s long-haired, silk-shirt clad neighbor. “But Antonio assured me that, in his country, there’s nothing even remotely romantic about a platonic male friend holding hands with my girl or running his fingers through her hair or coming on the past three of our dates. What can I say? She’s a social butterfly.” As of press time, the couple was seen lounging on the beach as a mysterious golden-haired stranger rubbed Emma’s back with tanning oil.

American public anxiously awaiting season finale of 2016 Presidential Election

AMERICA — Jiggling their legs and refreshing their newsfeeds, citizens this week continued to anticipate the upcoming season finale of 2016 Presidential Election. “I bet you they do something crazy just for the hell of it,” speculated Tony Biggins as he sat on his couch with a bag of Doritos and a beer. “Did you see the GOP auditions? I can’t believe that guy was still in. They’re just keeping him on for ratings, right? Who knows! It’s Presidential Election!” As of press time, polls showed most Americans planned on watching The Voice instead.

Apple advertising team recruits man for his genderless, raceless hands

CUPERTINO, CA — The Apple advertising department recently hired Adisa Adelola as a full time hand model after noticing his seemingly genderless, raceless hands on a popular pornography site. “I got a call one day and I was hired at Apple the day after. It was surreal—I still have no idea how they found me,” said Adelola as he repeatedly fingered the home button of an iPhone. “I’m just glad somebody finally wanted me for something besides my genderless, raceless ass.” As of press time, Adelola was last seen in a workshop at Apple, learning how to swipe through apps less sexually.

Drunken girl accidentally wins poetry slam

AUSTIN — With the teleprompter off, the audience off the hook, and the wine flowing freely, it was a new day for the young dozens of poets who gathered in the dimly lit room at the Austin Center for Film to compete in the annual poetry slam. As the evening wore on, the crowd became more and more rowdy, cheering for their favorite poets and jeering at the newcomers. But one particular moment stood out among all the others.

As the last poet of the night took the stage, the air was filled with anticipation. The room was silent as the poet began to recite their work. The crowd held their breath as they listened to the words flow from the poet’s lips. And then, just when everyone thought the evening had reached its peak, something unexpected happened.

As the poet finished their final lines, the audience erupted into applause. They had all been waiting for this moment, and now that they were finally here, they didn’t want it to end. The poet, however, was feeling a bit more nervous. They had never performed in front of such a large crowd before, and they weren’t sure how the audience would react.

But as they stepped back from the stage, the poet felt a wave of relief wash over them. They had done it. They had conquered their fears and given their best performance of the night. And as they walked away, they knew that they had left a lasting impression on the audience. As the poet made their way towards the exit, they couldn’t help but feel a sense of pride and accomplishment. They had done something bold and courageous, and they were proud of themselves for doing it.
RIO 2016 OLYMPICS

THE PLAN

1. Olympic torch used to celebrate global brotherhood
2. Everyone is super impressed by the cordial political climate
3. Provide first-class housing for all the athletes
4. Host multiple athletic events
5. Javelins used in classic track-and-field event
6. The airports take all the necessary steps to provide reliable flights
7. American spectators wear tasteful attire and appreciate Brazilian culture
8. Christ the Redeemer in pristine condition, watching over each event

THE TRAGIC REALITY

1. Olympic torch filled with citronella to keep away mosquitoes
2. President may or may not be impeached by July
3. They’ll all sleep on the floor of the stadium Hurricane Katrina Astrodome style
4. All events replaced with soccer
5. Javelins used to hunt masses of feral jaguars swarming the stadium
6. Everyone has layovers until the next Olympics in 2020
7. Americans go way fucking overboard on colorful headdresses
8. Christ the Redeemer dressed in carnival garb, knocked over
Sorry guys, last call just ended. You want a drink, you gotta go somewhere else. All right, I’ll take a look. This her? Yeah, I seen her. Photo doesn’t do her justice though. She’s been around here before. Every so often. Last here on Tuesday, I think. Maybe Monday, too. Monday thought that was odd, you know? Not many people come here on a Monday or Tuesday. Strange, if you ask me. Nope. Only come here on a Monday or Tuesday. That right? Musta been one crazy somnambuth. No, never saw her fighting anyone. Well, there was this one guy. Sort of a suspicious type. Normally I wouldn’t have thought much of him, but he just didn’t seem like the kind of guy she would be with. She could do better, you know. Small guy. Kinda orange-y. Skin like felt. You know the type. Yeah, he was with her Tuesday. They came in, had a few drinks. Well, he did. I don’t remember her drinking much. Something didn’t feel right between them. Nah, not like that. Just kinda off, you know? Nope, that’s the only time he ever came in here. But we get his type here all the time. Usually at least one a night. Yeah. Strange thing is, they usually come in alone. And leave alone. Don’t often see one come in with a broad like that. Or any broad. Even rarer see ’em alone. Nah, I didn’t catch his name. Pretty sure. Wait, I think I started with an M. Mike, Mark, something like that. Sorry, I don’t remember anything else.

If you want to know where to find him, ask Schmutzy, at the end of the bar. The two of them got to talkin’ a fair bit. But, yeah, I seen her.

Fair enough. What do you have to say about Travesty? This will sound hyperbolic, but it genuinely saved my life. Blindly, my mind was in a dark place, and I had no idea where to turn to. All I knew was that I had a childhood dream of becoming a comedian, and I had that Rohit laugh inside me. That was a good enough reason for me to apply, and fortunately, they let me in. From that point on, the Travesty itself soared to new heights, I was able to turn my life around and accomplish all my dreams and more (interviewing Jon Stewart, performing stand-up in a packed comedy club, etc.). I owe this all to the people and friends I made in Travesty. It helped me get enough about that, I'm here today to discuss the movie Antz. But enough about that, I'm here today to discuss the movie Antz (c.1998) starring alleged Bill Cosby fan Woody Allen. Did you know he's Jewish? Of course you did. What I bet you didn't know about Antz is that it helped me get through my first and third circumcisions. It was Dreamworks' first animated film and their last anti-rated film, until this letter inspires Hollywood to get off their lazy thoraxes and make a sequel. Anyways, Antz was always there for me when my dad would spend all night screaming yiddish (the native tongue of alleged Polanski-apollo Woody Allen) at the moon. I would hide in my room, watching Antz and eating animal crackers. Oh, I miss the way the crummy hits would cement the holes between my heart and my chest. By the way, did you hear they're making an Animal Crackers movie starring Sylvester Stallone? That's right, the Austrian Aardvark who also starred in the movie Antz. So here we find ourselves again, lost in the ant farm of life, listening to Michael Jackson's cover of Alien Ant Farms hit smooth Criminal on repeat. Safe. Home.

The Travesty has given me some of my closest friends (Xavier, Nick, Chris, Justin, Ethan, Maryam, Charleem, Cream Dan, Steely Dan, Steely Dan, Steely Dan, Steve Tom Cruise). For this, I am forever indebted to the University of Austin at Dallas.

After joining the Travesty my freshman year, I am both the longest serving staff member as well as the most worthless staff member. Now that I'm leaving the squad, some other schmuck will have to take over my role as the Travesty itself soared to new heights, I was able to turn my life around and accomplish all my dreams and more (interviewing Jon Stewart, performing stand-up in a packed comedy club, etc.). I owe this all to the people and friends I made in Travesty who had the patience to let me figure out who I was and let me be me. I pray that I helped everyone as much as they helped me and that the Travesty keeps giving these opportunities to people who were just as lost as I was when I first joined. I have full faith that the people who are a part of it now will make sure that this will be the case. Quite literally, thank you for giving me my life back.
