Old man sitting on park bench throwing dead birds

DALLAS —As is his custom, Old Man Jenkins was seen at the park hurling dead birds into the sky last Sunday. "Oh, hello. I hope you don't mind me here," Jenkins told reporters, sporting his characteristic wide brimmed hat and kindly, knowing smile. "You know, I don't get out much, but when I get the chance I do love to watch my birds." With a wink, heave, and spray of feathers and blood, onlookers smiled as Jenkins hurled avian carcasses across the pristine landscape of the Eastwoods Neighborhood park.

Man in boots don't like your kind

WACO, TX — Boot-wearing Bruce Pierson, six-foot-two and skin made of rawhide, adjusted his belt buckle and spit out his chaw before making you aware of the fact that he don't like your kind. "Your type ain't welcome round these parts, hombre," said Pierson through a mouthful of succotash he had been storing in his pockets. "If'n you get to thinking your folk oughta hunker down here, you may find yourself plumb outta luck in this here town come real soon." At press time, Pierson was rustling up some grub and speaking his mind to the lawman on account of your type representing a danger he ain't seen here in a long time.

Point: Hold me

Mamma, please take me into your arms. The world is crushing my adolescent spirit and I need to feel your rough, maternal hands upon my sinewy body. Your blood is my blood and I wish to feel our pulses synchronize as I lie in your embrace. I am enfeebled. Without your touch, I may never regain the strength necessary to continue in this cruel, cold world. You are my mother and I love you. Our connection precedes my corporeal form. I was the child you always wanted, so please hold me now. I beg of you.

Counterpoint: You have leprosy

Do not use your sweet, twisted words on me. Beg as you may, our blood is no longer one. Yours is tainted, you diseased mongrel. As I watch you kneel before me, our family crest upon your cardigan, I am heartbroken. How could you taint our esteemed family name? Leprosy? One hundred years of inbreeding to keep our bloodline pure, and you go and catch leprosy? I knew your little fascination with the common armadillo would be the ruin of us. No! Do not come closer. You wished to lie among those creatures and you must face the consequences. I will never take you in my arms again.

Area vulva tired of being mislabeled as area vagina

PHILADELPHIA — Sarah Anderson's vulva expressed her frustration at being mislabeled as a vagina this morning after disappointing sex. "I don't understand what's so hard about distinguishing me—who clearly has folds of skin—from a fucking muscular canal," said Anderson's vulva, as Anderson freshened up from the night before. "Look, I get it, everybody thinks it all looks the same down there. But in reality, I look entirely different and perform entirely different functions than Sarah's vagina. I mean, if Sarah's boyfriend can distinguish between his dick and balls, he can distinguish me from her vagina." As of press time, Anderson's vulva could be seen desperately trying to explain to Anderson's boyfriend where the clitoris is.

Report: Tony Hawk never loved you

DENVER — Tony Hawk, the two-time Olympic gold medalist snowboarder and world renowned sex icon, has officially announced that he Never Loved You. "You know, I only love one thing—carvin' up that gnarly powder," said Hawk, fingering a lock of his signature, shiny red mane. "Snowboarding and snow bunnies are the only things I care about. I, Tony Hawk, the man who is known for snowboarding and nothing else, have always loved snowboarding but I can't say I've ever loved a babe." As of press time, Hawk was seen waxing his lucky snowboard in preparation for the upcoming Winter X-Games because he's a snowboarder.

White guy with dreadlocks has an opinion

AUSTIN — Last Wednesday, Dan Spina, a white guy with dreadlocks, announced to classmates in his 'Race in the Media' class that he had an opinion. "But why isn't it 'All Lives Matter'? We're all important. Race is just a concept," said Spina, who has reportedly been growing his blond locs since his high school days in suburban Dallas. "Cultural appropriation? Doesn't exist. We're all part of the human race." As of press time, Spina was discussing plans for a tattoo featuring a sankofa symbol superimposed on Bob Marley's face.

Letter of Address from First Lady Michelle Obama

Last Thursday, I entered my husband's office around 3 in the morning. I could tell by the thin layer of orange dust and cocaine on the carpet that he had just finished meeting with President-elect Donald Trump. I could feel the aura of the room: cold. Not like my Barry.

"Hey babe..." I murmured timidly.

"Yes, Michelle?" he replied, spinning to face me in his chair. He had not shaved in several days and his shirt was untucked. I could smell the alcohol on his breath.

He was holding an old photo of him and Joe giving the thumbs-up at Comic-Con. I glimpsed a tear roll down his cheek. His grip loosened and the frame shattered as it hit the ground.

"Barack, I know you're upset," I said, rushing to his side and gathering him in my arms. "But you did everything you could for Hillary and you should be damn proud."

"Well, it wasn't enough, was it?" he retorted bitterly. That man, he talks tough but he never gives himself enough credit. "I have so much faith in our country, Michelle, but... But damn if it doesn't break my heart to see a man so indifferent to social injustice become our next President!"

"I know baby, I know." What else could I say? I rubbed his back and looked down at the picture, tears welling in my eyes. He loved that photo. If only Joe were here now, I thought to myself. Joe always knows what to say to make Barry smile...

I spotted a near-empty pack of Marlboro's in the drawer of my husband's desk. I let it slide. And then it hit me—I knew exactly the thing he needed.

"I bet I have something that can cheer you up," I said, reaching into my bag. A mischievous smile spread across my face. "When was the last time you saw a pickle this good, Barry?" I dangled a savory pickle betwixt my spindly fingers. Barry's soft lips betrayed a smirk.

"You know me too well, Michelle. Gimme." He closed his eyes and opened his mouth. I knew then that everything was going to be okay. I breathed a sigh of relief.

America, I am writing to you today through the country's most widely syndicated newspaper, the Texas Travesty, because I have a message. Do not despair! You, the millennials, voted overwhelmingly in favor of our Democratic Party. The ignorance of others may inhibit social progress now, but on judgment day, when the Lord's fearful wrath looks upon our souls, we all get our pickle. We all get our savory, savory pickle. God bless us, everyone.

Sincerely,

Michelle Obama

Mom and salmon-colored throw pillow a match made in heaven

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA — Suburban soccer mom and self-proclaimed interior designer, Tammy Miller, created a match made in heaven with her recently bought salmon-colored throw pillow. "I swung on over to TJ Maxx the other day while I was waiting for Tyler's Model UN meeting to get out and that's when me and that little fringed beauty locked eyes and hearts," explained Miller as she did some housework with the pillow under her arm. "I honestly wasn't even looking to buy—I was just gonna browse the ath-leisure section for some high-waisted yoga pants but when I saw the throw pillow, I knew that we were meant to find one another." At press time, Miller was seen on the phone with the family photographer setting up a shoot for her and the pillow next weekend.

Church of Scientology sues man one thetan at a time

LOS ANGELES — The Church of Scientology recently announced its plan to sue each individual thetan in Nikolai Rai's body. "At first we didn't think we were up to the job," said Reginald Bellbottoms IV Esq., the church's attorney, "but then we imagined it not as us suing all his thetans, but all our thetans against all of his. This trial shall be a holy war and we are the anointed crusaders. We will crush the infidel thetans. They had the Hubbarddamned nerve to write that blog post. It was a very mean blog post." At press time, Bellbottoms was preparing for the fourth of 79 trials on behalf of the Church of Scientology, which is definitely not a cult. I repeat, the Church of Scientology is not a cult. The Texas Travesty would like to publicly say that the Church is a completely valid church, not a cult.

Local man finally sad enough to drink Busch Lite

EL PASO, TX — After an extended period of reflection on his life, career, and personal appearance, local man Aaron Beckner has reportedly decided that he is finally sad enough to crack open a case of Busch Lite. “Back in the good ol’ days, it was always Natty or Bud—Miller Lite, if I was celebratin,” explained Beckner, nailing an “Out of Business” sign onto the door of his now-defunct bait shop. “After Leanne left, I moved down to Rolling Rock and then on to Keystone. I guess you never really know rock bottom ‘til you get there.” At press time, Beckner was patiently waiting for his beer to go flat in the afternoon sun.

Serious drama unfolding in old FIG GroupMe

AUSTIN — A GroupMe dedicated to the First-Year Interest Group “Economics and You” became active for the first time since 2013 this Thursday, when former group member Jordan Rafferty posted “All lives matter” for no apparent reason. The manifesto that followed covered topics ranging from the recent presidential election to the FIG mentor’s planned activities. “U never really cared about us Ashley,” complained Rafferty. “If u did we would’ve gone to South Congress like u promised.” As of press time, FIG mentor Ashley Razick had finally joined the conversation to ask if everyone could Venmo her for the pizza she bought three years ago.

Roommate courageously admits to clogging the toilet

AUSTIN — Twenty-year-old Alice Fisher did the unthinkable this Tuesday when she approached her roommate and revealed that she was responsible for clogging their shared bathroom toilet. “Since moving into a joint apartment, I couldn’t go a night without having petrifying nightmares about obstructing the toilet. They would always end with my roommate standing in the doorway and turning slowly, pointing an accusatory finger at me. I would always wake up screaming,” said Fisher in an effort to explain why it took so long for her to admit wrongdoing. “At first, I was really scared. Then one day I woke up and realized that it’s okay to ask for help. I no longer feel ashamed.” As of press time, Fisher was reportedly gazing proudly at the mixture of water and human excrement spilling out from her toilet bowl.

Albino squirrel suffers meltdown under pressure of stardom

AUSTIN — Sources confirm that the University of Texas’ albino squirrel has suffered an intense mental breakdown after buckling under weight of campus stardom, falling into a dangerous spiral of heavy narcotics and alcohol to cope with the pressure that has seemingly broken his tiny will. “He still can’t even admit that he has a problem. That’s the worst part,” said junior Michael Pearson, who added that the UT community has banded together around their fallen hero. “Rehab is next for the little guy. I just hope he gets out soon though. I have a biochem test next week.” The students have reportedly decided to show support for his full recovery at a candlelight vigil in front of UT’s renowned tower next Monday.

5 SECRETS JAMES COMEY WANTS TO TELL YOU BUT CAN'T

FBI Director James Comey made a splash this election season when he disclosed the possibility that Hillary Clinton's email scandal might not be over. Through an exclusive partnership with WikiLeaks, the Travesty has obtained Comey's personal diary. Here are the five juiciest secrets we learned.

God puts Cleveland in its place again

KINGDOM OF HEAVEN — Following Game 7 of the 2016 World Series, The Lord God Almighty has announced that he has finally put the city of Cleveland, Ohio back in its rightful place. "I told those assholes not to get their hopes up," explained The Author and Finisher of Our Faith, pausing to smite some lowly orphan with cancer. "Fifty years without a championship, and then I let the Cavs win just to get their hopes up, all so I can humiliate them the same way I did Golden State." At press time, God was considering relocating every Cleveland professional sports team just to fuck them a little more.

Conventional Oven seeks unconventional lover

MILWAUKEE — Disillusioned by the tedium of white-picket-fence America, conventional oven May Tag is seeking a fresh, unconventional lover. “They ask me what I’m looking for. Heck if I know, I’ve spent the past twelve years cooking up store-brand frozen pizzas for the same nuclear family. I think I should be the one asking you,” said Tag, her resentment for the coldness of her stainless steel environment almost palpable. “I want someone to take me to a kitchen island out there, to open my doors, someone to cook up something special and unfamiliar.” As of press time, Tag was seen cozying up to a French Press the family bought on their guided tour across Europe.

Area masochist disappointed election season over

AUSTIN — After closing his MSNBC tab and frantically searching through TMZ and Daily Mail websites for any form of controversy, area masochist Hector Ramirez lamented that the tumultuous election cycle is, at last, over. “I really got off on forcing myself to watch the debate on repeat, paying close attention to Twitter and Facebook commentary from people I went to high school with,” said Ramirez, who has been known to watch post-debate Tomi Lahren videos in their entirety. “Now that Tr*mp’s won, everything is fucked—I can’t even sustain an erection anymore because our country is now totally destroyed and everything is wrong and dark.” At press time, Ramirez was found loitering outside of the dilapidated Bernie Sanders headquarters in downtown Austin.

Local dog wears hat, looks great

PORTLAND — A local Pembroke Welsh Corgi was spotted wearing a miniature top hat upon his head while walking to an unknown destination. “He looked absolutely fabulous—I’ve never seen anything so dashing in all my life. I took one look and thought, ‘Now that dog is going places!’” said area florist Marsha Wheatley, one of many townspeople reportedly mesmerized by the pup’s snappy look. “I’ve got to find out where he got that hat... I hope they have it in my size.” The dog was last seen trotting through the park with a matching monocle on his snout.

Spanish conquistador hiding indifference toward gold

TENOCHTITLAN — Spanish conquistador, Fernando Fernando, has been hiding his indifference toward gold from his bloodthirsty companions. “I always wanted to be a doctor but my dad was a conquistador and his dad was a conquistador so I kind of just got pulled into it,” whispered Fernando to a local Aztec during a routine massacre. “I don’t hate gold, but I really prefer silver. Do you guys have any silver? I know I’m holding a saber to your neck but help me out here.” As of press time, Fernando was last seen sneaking off to avoid a conversation about the importance of gold.

Pope Francis still stumbling upon Benedict’s old hats

VATICAN CITY — This past weekend, Pope Francis was reportedly still stumbling upon Benedict’s old hats. “I was rummaging around in this recently excavated tomb they found below the Vatican,” said Pope Francis, adding another digit to his Excel spreadsheet marked, ‘BENEDICT’S LEFTOVERS.’ “And there were at least three mitres next to a rotting carcass of Pope Gregory V. I mean, I don’t want to say anything, because I’m, you know, the NICE pope, but it’s pretty rude to just leave your stuff everywhere before you resign.” As of press time, Pope Francis was seen fishing another white peaked cone out of the Maderno fountain.

WHICH OF THESE TURKEYS DESERVES TO DIE?

Tiny man stuck in storm drain

WASHINGTON — During a tense press conference earlier today, police chief Gordy Ramirez confirmed that a tiny man has fallen into in a storm drain and is unable to get out. “We want to get him out of there as fast as possible, but he’s not cooperating. He’s just so scared,” said Ramirez in his address to the media and concerned citizens. “Let’s just hope the man survives the night. We’ve been dropping down baggies of fruit snacks down to him. We’ve been doing everything in our power.” Sources report that the state legislature is racing to allocate more resources to the rescue effort.

Dad wants to show you hotline bling parody video

MIAMI GARDENS, FL — Sources indicate that just this morning you received a Facebook message from Dad with a link to a “Hotline Bling” parody video. “Hey Kiddo! Your mother and I hope college is going well,” read your father’s message. “I know you’ve been having some trouble working out your differences with Karen, so here’s a funny video your uncle Chip showed your mother.” As you scanned the message, you reportedly couldn’t help but both roll your eyes at the mention of such an outdated pop-culture reference and tear up a little bit at the way-too-soon reminder of how the girl you loved ruthlessly stomped on your poor, single heart. “This video’s just got us in stitches! Hope it brightens your day, pal,” your dad’s message concluded. As of press time, the video was only in its fourth minute of nine, an amount of time sources have confirmed is way too fucking long to sit through while crying.
